Using Web 2.0 Tools to Boost Your Program's Effectiveness

NYLA SLMS May 2, 2009 Saratoga Spring, NY Polly-Alida Farrington

Agenda

- Tools to help you get information and resources out to students, teachers and administrators.
- Tools & applications to help you communicate with your school communities.

<http://lib20.pbworks.com>

A close-up photograph of a yellow fire hydrant. A powerful stream of water is spraying out from the side of the hydrant, creating a large, white, turbulent plume that fills the right side of the frame. The background is dark, making the bright yellow of the hydrant and the white of the water stand out.

Getting information off the Internet is like taking a drink from a fire hydrant.

Mitchell Kapor

“the speed of young people’s web searching means that little time is spent in evaluating information, either for relevance, accuracy or authority”

SCHOOLS AND TWITTER:

About 11 percent of online adults use Twitter or a similar network to update their "status" on social networking sites, according to Pew Internet & American Life Project. If you are interested in following Georgia schools on Twitter, log on to twitter.com and join the fan club of followers.

Schools turn to Twitter to get news to parents

By D. AILEEN DODD
The Atlanta Journal-Constitution
Wednesday, April 29, 2009

What do pop star Ashton Kutcher and a bold group of high-profile Georgia public school image-makers have in common?

They tweet.

What do you think about the idea of receiving Twitter messages from your school or the state DOE? Twitter, the free social networking service, is being used by celebs, CEOs, soccer moms and now even tech-sawy school districts to keep the public informed about important, and not so important, daily events.

[Post a comment on this story below.]

From the banal to the braggadocios, "tweets" about student achievement, homework, school plays and school boards in Georgia and across the nation are being sent to cellphones like breaking news bulletins interrupting network programming.

The headlines, up to 140 characters, are shared with "followers" — mostly parents and educators — who sign up to get messages.

In his opinion, he would be doing his bit in contributing to the molding of the youth into better citizens of the country. He saw a school that will be a place where pupils can acquire a keen understanding of values and a vivid sense of the beautiful and morally good. Thus, in June of 1960, the school became operational emphasizing on the following: (1) strict discipline and proper conduct, (2) academic excellence, and (3) charity.

Principal's Solicitation Letter for Uno at 50

The school will be releasing letters of solicitation for the 50th Foundation Day celebrations. As a security measure and for documentation purposes, we have numbered the solicitation letters on the upper right and the lower right side of the letters.

You will also see the signature initials of the finance committee head, Ms. Kathy Seminiano, on those numbers.

Allies Book Sale for Grandparents' Day

We welcome grandparents to campus today. Already we have had many visitors to the library and have been busily handing out newspapers and books for grandparents to read while their grandchildren are preparing for class. The Allies are hosting an Adopt-a-Book table in the Arena where a lovely lunch for the families is being held.

Each Wednesday morning, after chapel talk, advisee groups settle comfortably into various parts of the library to discuss upcoming events and check in with their advisors. Mrs. White's group meets around the table in the electronic classroom to share events of campus life and discuss whatever might be of interest to them at the moment.
